Lighthorne Parish Register Volume 1, 1538 - 1715 (WCRO DR0018/1)

Produced with the kind permission of the Warwickshire County Record Office

Transcription by Colin Such (2022)

Introduction

Original records of the Lighthorne baptisms/christenings, marriages and burials exist from 1538 onwards and are stored at the Warwick County Record Office (WCRO), in 6 volumes, with reference numbers DR0018/1 to DR0018/6. Microfilm copies are available for consultation, as are scans on various websites. My transcriptions are of the scans seen on ancestry.co.uk. Permission to publish my transcriptions has been obtained from the Warwick County Record Office and is gratefully acknowledged.

Volume 1 (DR0018/1) is described by WCRO as 3 separate books sewn together and it appears from the scans that the central book has taller pages than the first and third books, as the tops of the pages have been folded down and are difficult to read and sometimes illegible. The fabric on which the records in volume 1 are written is either parchment or vellum and the records on vellum are sometimes difficult to read. The period covered in volume 1 is 1538 to 1715. The 98 pages of manuscript start with baptisms recorded at the front of the first book, marriages towards the centre and burials towards the rear. Later the records become intermingled. In 1632 the rector writes in the register (page 38) nowe followethe Christeninges mariages and burialls sett all together for want of parchmente.

The 16th century entries are in Latin and gradually English appears at the beginning of the 17th century. The rector, Rudolph/Ralph Lees, died in July 1643 and the new rector, John Philpott continued the ledger mainly in English. When the entry is in Latin given names are in the Latin form, suitably declined, eg Guilihelmus (nominative) and Guilihelmi (genitive) for William. Few people were literate in the 16th and 17th centuries and spelling was not uniform. Surnames were often written phonetically, with variations in spelling, even in the same register entry.

Entries of burials between 1678 and 1715 are repeated, usually with the comment in woollen added, in the second register (DR0018/2). However there are a few burials recorded in the second register only and not in the first. These have been noted in this transcription, in the chronological sequence.

Conventions used in the transcriptions

The pages of the register are un-numbered and the numbering of them is mine. I have not viewed the cover and I have given the cover verso page number 1. The entries start on page 2.

Names have been transcribed as written, whether in Latin or English, but the index records only the equivalent English names.

Dubious transcriptions are indicated with square brackets and a question mark.

Illegible words are indicated by dots within square brackets and missing or illegible passages are indicated by a row of dots.

Burials from volume 1 (DR0018/1), between 1678 and 1715, have been repeated in volume 2 and this repetition has been used to check difficult to read words. Such words are indicated by an asterisk *.

Words which have been abbreviated in the manuscript have been extended, with the inserted letters in italics, as in 'Thomas'.

Words or passages in the register which appear to be a later insertion are indicated between pointed brackets <thus> .

Transcriber's notes appear in blue, within square brackets.

I have provided a translation of my understanding of phrases in Latin. These are in square brackets. It must be noted that I have little knowledge of Latin and my translations cannot be relied upon as 100% accurate. Common Latin words such as filius and die are not translated.

The Julian and Gregorian calendars explained

The Julian calendar was in use in England until 1752 with the year ending on 24th March and the new year starting on 25th March. The Gregorian calendar, with the year ending on 31st December, was introduced in Europe in 1582, but was not officially used in England until 1752, in which year 2nd September was followed by 14th September in order to accommodate the change. However some vicars used the Gregorian calendar before 1752 and thus it is necessary to know which calendar is being used for dates recorded between 1st January and 24th March. Where it is obvious which calendar is being used, by the sequential nature of the entries, the date is recorded thus: 23 januarij 1628 [1629], meaning that 1628 is the date recorded in the register, but in today's Gregorian calendar we would know it as 1629. Where the choice of calendar is uncertain a question mark is used.

Summary of contents of Lighthorne register, volume 1 (1538 - 1715) DR0018/1

The scans on Ancestry are divided into 3 sections: 1538 - 1599, 1600 - 1674 and 1675 - 1724. The column on the right gives the Ancestry page number which equates with the transcription page number.

[It is not clear whether the rector, William Smart, was using the Julian or Gregorian calendar for these burials in 1600, 1601 and 1602. Those recorded in 1612 and later are in the hand of the rector Ralph Lees and as the dates recorded under each year postdate 25 March of that year and continue beyond 31 December to 24 March, it is assumed that the Julian calendar was in use and the Gregorian date, which we use today, is given in square brackets.]
